

PR Jr.

Tim: Hi, Tomohiro! How are you?

Tomohiro: I'm good, How about you?

Tim: I'm okay, thank you. What are you doing?

Tomohiro: I'm writing my report.

Tim: Oh, I see. Would you like a coffee?

Tomohiro: No, thanks.

Tim: Ok.

PR 1

Tim: Hey, Tomohiro. How's it going?

Tomohiro: Not too bad, I'm a little bit sleepy, though.

Tim: Yeah, me too, actually. What are you doing there?

Tomohiro: I'm working on some reports. And also, checking the weather forecast for tomorrow.

Tim: Oh, yeah. Hope it's going to be sunny.

Tomohiro: Well, not according to this, I'm afraid.

Tim: Ah, that's a shame. Well, I'm going to make a cup of coffee for myself. Would you like one, too?

Tomohiro: Oh, no thanks, I'm okay.

Tim: All right. No worries.

PR 2

Tim:

Hum, listen to this.

For more than 13 years, an old train car has been serving as a tourist information center outside Tokyo's busy Shibuya station. It stands just opposite the stature of Hachiko, the famous Akita dog.

The green train car, nicknamed "green frog" because of its color, is a Tokyu Railways carriage. It will be moved to Odate in Akita prefecture, the hometown of Hachiko, sometime around early June.

In Odate, the train car will be used as a resting space for visitors from July in a sightseeing facility promoting the internationally popular breed of dog.

Tomohiro:

Oh, yeah. Really? I didn't know that.

Tim:

Pretty cool.