

Dictation Contest (PRJr, 初級) No. 1072

Hello, everyone! Welcome back to another PR Junior video!

Today we will be talking about Lisa's sleeping routine.

Lisa goes to bed at 9pm every day. After dinner, around 8pm, Lisa gets ready to rest. She would brush her teeth, take a warm bath, and change into pajama. She would turn on her bedroom lamp and read some bedtime story for 30 minutes before falling asleep.

That's it for today! See you next time!

Hey, everyone! Welcome back to the PR1 dictation challenge!

The War of the Roses was a chaotic time for England. During the middle ages, many powerful families were fighting for control over the British Isles. Many families fell apart as a result of this terrible war. This war gets its name from the nobility that fought in it. The Lancaster's and the York's were two families that had roses as their family symbol. So, when looking back at this historical event, we called it the War of the Roses. It sounds pretty cool, doesn't it? During this war, the Lancaster family and the York family had many battles against each other. From those battles came heroes of legend.

The War of the Roses is a very interesting time period and I recommend you learn more about it!

Thank you!

Hey, guys! How are you doing?

Hope you're all still staying healthy and safe.

Now, as some of you may know, one of my favourite films, or film trilogies, and certainly my favourite three-part telling of one big adventure story, is the Lord of the Rings. As well as providing me great joy personally, these films are also technically incredible from a cinematic point of view, and were extremely successful in their day. And of course, whenever a franchise is successful and popular, the movie studios seek to make more money out of it. For fans, this can be a good thing, because it means more content from a beloved universe, but it can also be a bad thing if that new content tarnishes that franchise's good reputation. That being said, take a listen to this:

A fresh instalment in the Lord of the Rings movie series, one of the biggest film franchises of all time, is scheduled to debut in theatres in 2026. It is one of two new Lord of the Rings films announced by Warner Brothers Discovery CEO David Zaslav on May 9th. Andy Serkis will reprise his role as Gollum and will direct the first of the two films, which has a working title of Lord of the Rings: The Hunt for Gollum. Peter Jackson, who directed the Lord of the Rings trilogy two decades ago followed by three Hobbit movies, will serve as a producer of the new films. Prior franchise movies have earned almost 6 billion dollars worldwide.

So, there you go! Will these new movies be good, or will they ruin everything? I guess we'll see.

Alright, guys, well, until next time – and as always – study hard, stay safe, and I'll see you soon.
