Hello, guys! How are you?

I hope you are doing great!

Today, I want to show you a new book. It is called I Can be Anything. This book is about Natsumi and she pretends to be something, and her mom has to guess what she is. It is a very interesting book. So, we will read it from next time, okay?

Take care and see you next time!

Hey, guys! How's it going?

So last time, it was revealed that Darth Vader is actually Luke's father. The hero and villain of our space adventure are family! What a twist! Let's see how Luke is doing after his defeat...

Luke clings to a weathervane underneath Bespin. He uses the Force to call to Princess Leia for help. Meanwhile, Lando helps Leia, Chewbacca, and the droids make a daring escape on the Millennium Falcon. They quickly save Luke and flee the cloud city.

Oh, so Lando came back to help them! I guess he's not such a bad guy after all. Join me for the ending next time, okay?

See you, guys!

Hey, guys! How are you doing?

Hope you're all still staying healthy and safe.

Now, have any of you ever been on a cruise ship before? I've never really considered taking a cruise, and I'm especially not thinking about it at the moment, but it seems like a popular thing to do in Japan – and I've definitely seen lots of big, exciting-looking cruise ships around Tokyo and Yokohama. But take a listen to this:

A new sea terminal in Tokyo that can accommodate the world's largest cruise ships opened its doors September 10th after the novel coronavirus pandemic postponed its launch, originally scheduled for July. The Tokyo International Cruise Terminal, located in the capital's Daiba waterfront area, however, has only opened its observation deck in the terminal building to the public with no visits by ships carrying passengers expected for the time being. At present, only the Nippon Maru cruise ship with just its crew members is anchored at the terminal. Its departure date has not been decided.

Ah, so not so many cruise ships coming in and out at the moment, but this observation deck seems like it might be worth a look, so maybe I'll go and check it out and take some pictures!

Alright, guys, well until next time – and as always – study hard, stay safe, and I'll see you soon.
