Hey, guys! How’s it going?

So last time, Luke, Leia, and Han went down to the forest moon of Endor for a special mission. But they were discovered by scout troopers and got separated. Let’s see what happens to them, now:

Lost, Leia meets a small, furry creature called an Ewok. His name is Wicket. Luke rejoins Han and the Rebel strike team. They are worried because Leia has not returned. But, as the heroes set off to find the princess, they are trapped in a net. WHOOSH! The Rebels are captured by Ewoks.

Ooh, what are these strange Ewok creatures? Are they friendly? Or are they dangerous? Let’s find out next time!

Okay, guys, see you!

Hey, guys! How are you doing?

Hope you're all still staying healthy and safe. And I hope you're all still hanging in there in general!

The coronavirus-related restrictions seem to be a little bit more relaxed these days, but there are still many things we can't do as freely as we could before and so a lot of people are still feeling a little frustrated, or restless, at least. One of the things that I – and, I guess, many other people – really want to be able to do again is travel. There are so many places I haven't been yet and one of the places I really want to go is Italy. Take a listen to this:

During the 12th and 13th centuries, the central Italian town of Viterbo was a favourite place for popes to escape the stress of Rome, a hundred kilometers to the south. For the modern visitor, though, there's a more thrilling reason to visit – to see the annual procession of the Machine of Santa Rosa. This thirty-meter-tall tower draws in crowds to see it being carried through the narrow streets of the Old Town. The original "machine" was built to remember the transfer of the body of Santa Rosa, the city's patron saint, in 1258.

Huh! So, there's another little slice of culture that I didn't know about. All the more reason to visit Italy, I guess. What about you guys? Where's a place that you really want to go? Please let me know, okay?

Alright, guys, well, as always – study hard, stay safe, and I'll see you soon.
