Dictation Contest (PR1, 中級) No. 156

Hey guys, how's it going?

So last time in our epic space adventure, Luke and his father Darth Vader made peace with each other after defeating the evil Emperor. But what about the Death Star? Can the Rebels destroy it once and for all? Let's find out:

Meanwhile, the battle rages in space. Evading lasers and zooming TIE fighters, Lando and Nien Nunb fly the Millennium Falcon deep into the Death Star. They destroy the main reactor and the giant station begins to collapse. The Rebels speed away as the Death Star explodes.

They did it! So now, the Empire has finally been vanquished! Awesome.

Join me next time, okay, guys? See you.

Hey guys, how you doing?

Hope you're all still staying healthy and safe.

Now, a video has been going around the news and social media sites recently of a Japanese man riding his bicycle very dangerously, seeming to deliberately steer towards oncoming cars, which is at best, very annoying and at worst, potentially pretty disastrous. But it looks like he's getting what he deserves. Take a listen:

A man already in custody for an alleged assault was served a fresh arrest warrant October twenty-sixth, making him the first cyclist to be charged for a road rage incident under a recently revised traffic law aimed at curbing dangerous driving.

Akihiko Narushima, thirty-three, was arrested for alleged assault after an October fifth incident in which he grabbed a man in his seventies by the collar when the man confronted him about his riding. Narushima had been witnessed cycling in an erratic matter and obstructing traffic in Saitama Prefecture's Okegawa and Ageo areas, according to police.

Ah! Well, I'm glad they caught that guy because in the video he seemed to be causing a lot of people a lot of bother, and especially this poor old man that he assaulted. But even without the assault, yeah, he was definitely behaving very badly and deserves punishment. But let me know what you guys think, okay?

Alright, well, as always, study hard, stay safe, and I'll see you soon.
