

Dictation Contest (PRJr, 初級) No. 188

Hi! Welcome to PR Jr dictation challenge. I will be reading my favourite book, Baker, Baker Cookie Maker again.

He puts the cookies on a plate, takes a cookie. Oops, too late! Baker, baker, cookie maker. Here comes a hungry cookie taker! COOKIES! COOKIES! Monster treat. Some for munchers, some for crunchers, none for the baker on Sesame Street.

I will see you next time.

Dictation Contest (PR1, 中級) No. 188

Hey, guys! How's it going?

So last time, we finished the first part of our new space adventure story. After a valiant effort, our heroes won the battle for Naboo. But it looks like the war is just beginning...

The galaxy is divided. Many planets are leaving the Republic to join the Separatist movement. Padme Amidala, once the queen of Naboo, is now a senator in the Republic. Soon after Padme arrives on the planet Coruscant for a Senate meeting, the ship explodes! Luckily she is not harmed.

Oh! So, it looks like somebody is out to get Padme. I hope she and our other heroes can stay safe. Let's find out next time!

See you, guys.

Hello guys, I hope you're all doing well and staying safe. Today, we have a request by Ayano from Ichigaya school. So we will be reading from this book, the Tokyo medical and dental university entrance exam. Are you ready?

Harambe, the 17-year-old Western lowland gorilla shot dead at the Cincinnati Zoo in May after a 3-year-old boy fell into his enclosure, may be physically gone, his tissues harvested for research and his sperm extracted to help diversify the captive breeding gene pool.

Yet the 440-pound silverback leaves another metaphorical gorilla in the room, raising questions that extend far beyond the particulars of the case, including whether the zoo or the boy's mother were more to blame for Harambe's death.

For primatologists and conservationists who devote their lives to studying the great apes and to doing what they can do to protect the rapidly vanishing populations of the primates in the wild, a linked set of ethical and practical dilemmas looms almost unbearably large.

Alright guys, great job. And I hope to see you next time. Take care.
