

Dictation Contest (PRJr, 初級) No. 190

Hi, welcome to PR junior dictation challenge!

I will read the story of Baker, Baker, Cookie Maker again. Listen carefully.

Cookie Monster, cookie cutter, makes a batch with peanut butter, cuts the cookies out of dough, puts them on the plate...

Oh, no!

Baker, baker, cookie maker, here comes another cookie taker!

What kind of cookie do you like? I love chocolate cookies.

I'll see you next time!

Dictation Contest (PR1, 中級) No. 190

Hey, guys! How's it going?

So last time, Padme was attacked once again and our hero Obi-Wan Kenobi leapt on to the assassin droid, which set off flying around the city.

Let's see what happens now...

Obi-Wan's flight is cut short by a bounty hunter named Zam Wesell. She blasts the droid to bits! As the Jedi plummets toward the ground, Zam jumps into her speeder and tries to escape. Zoom! Anakin arrives in a speeder just in time to catch Obi-Wan.

Ah! So, Obi-Wan is okay, but who is this mysterious bounty hunter? Is she working alone? And will she try to attack Padme again?

Let's find out next time!

See you, guys!

Dictation Contest (PR2 上級) No. 190

Hey, guys! How are you doing?

Hope you're all still staying healthy and safe.

I have a new story for you here that is as relevant as any other and I think fairly fitting for the end of the year. Take a listen.

The Kanji character for Mitsu, used repeatedly in calls to contain the spread of the novel coronavirus, has been picked as the kanji best describing this year's social mood in Japan, a Kyoto-based academic organization said December fourteenth. The character garnered 28,401 votes out of the 208,025 cast in a poll, or 13.65%, the foundation said. Mitsu on its own means "close" or "dense." The kanji has often been used as a way to raise public awareness about social distancing and the need to avoid crowded settings.

Ah, yes indeed. And that is our last dictation video for 2020. I hope you all have a lovely winter break and I wish you a very happy new year. And we'll see you in a couple of weeks for the first dictation video of 2021. But in the meantime, feel free to re-watch this and any other video just for some extra practice.

And as always, study hard, stay safe and I'll see you next year.
