Hey, guys! How's it going?

So last time, Obi-Wan discovered who was trying to assassinate Padme, but the bounty hunter got away. Let's find out if Obi-Wan and Anakin can capture her and find out who she is working for...

After a wild chase through the busy skies, Anakin leaps onto the bounty hunter's speeder and forces it to crash. The two Jedi capture Zam and ask her who is trying to hurt Padme. But before the bounty hunter can answer, she is silenced by a poison dart.

Oh! So, someone definitely doesn't want her to reveal any information. Hmm, very mysterious...

Let's see what happens next time, okay? Bye, guys!

Hey, guys! How are you doing?

Hope you're all still staying healthy and safe.

I have a story here relating to staying safe, and one that did the rounds on social media not so long ago. So, take a listen:

Tom Cruise has launched an expletive-laden rant at colleagues on the set of his latest Mission: Impossible movie, after he reportedly spotted two workers failing to respect social distancing rules. In the audio released by The Sun tabloid, the 58-year-old Hollywood star can be heard warning that anyone caught not following the rules to stay at least two meters away from others will be fired. "If I see you doing it again, you're gone. And if anyone on this crew does it, that's it," he is heard saying on the audio recorded during filming in Britain. During his outburst, Cruise catalogued the difficulties he and everyone in the film industry are facing during the coronavirus pandemic.

Hmm, yeah, there are several cases of leaked video or audio recordings of actors absolutely losing it on some poor individual or individuals, but I think, in this case, Tom is definitely in the right. In his rant, he talks about how not only are hundreds of jobs on the line, but that Hollywood and pretty much the entire film industry is looking to this production as an example – as a kind of test that will determine the future of movie making. So, I can definitely understand his frustration, especially as it pertains to people's safety and well-being. But let me know what you think, okay?

Alright, guys, well, until next time – and as always – study hard, stay safe, and I'll see you soon.
