

Dictation Contest (PRJr, 初級) No. 30

Hi! It's Tim.

How's it going?

I'm pretty good thanks. Hey, do you have any plans for tonight?

No? Great! Do you want to hang out?

I was thinking that we could get some dinner and watch a movie, and maybe play some video games. Or we could just talk.

What do you think? Does that sound good?

Hello? ...Hello?

Oh.

Dictation Contest (PR1, 中級) No. 30

Hey, man, how's it going?

Yeah...

Are you doing anything later?

Ah, I see. I was just going to ask if you wanted to hang out.

OK, yeah, maybe next time. See you.

Hey, do you have any plans tonight?

Ah, you do? Ah, OK.

No, I was just wondering if you wanted to do something.

Alright, have fun.

Hey, what are you doing later? Nothing?! Oh, do you want to hang out? Oh, you're tired?

OK, well, see-- oh.

Hey, are you free to hangout later?

You are?! Oh, great! Shall we get some dinner?

Awesome! Sounds good.

OK. See you later. Bye mom.

Hi, guys!

How are you doing? Staying safe and staying home I hope.

Now, I bet a lot of you are just watching TV most of the day, but do you know a show called Sazae-San? It's very famous and I have a little bit of news about it, so listen to this:

Millions of Japanese viewers of the world's longest-running animated cartoon TV show will have to make do with reruns from May 17th after the coronavirus pandemic disrupted production, Fuji Television Network said on May 10th. Aired every Sunday since 1969, Sazae-San features the everyday ups and downs of suburban housewife Sazae and her extended family, and is a household name for generations of Japanese. It can still attract around 10% of the viewing audience, according to some estimates, for its 30-minute slot at 6:30 p.m.

Oh, so new episodes for a while. Oh, dear! What a shame!

Well, I hope you guys can enjoy some older episodes and whatever other TV shows you like.

Alright, stay safe, guys. See you soon.
