

Dictation Contest (PRJr, 初級) No. 371

Hey, guys!

Here's the second part of the story, The Boy Who Cried Wolf:

"Don't cry 'Wolf!' when there's no wolf!" said the villagers angrily. The boy just laughed at them. After a while, he got bored and cried "Wolf!" again, fooling the villagers a second time. The angry villagers warned the boy again and left. The boy continued watching the flock. After a while, he saw a real wolf and cried loudly, "Wolf! Please help me! There is a wolf!"

Come back for the third part and final part of the story. See you!

Dictation Contest (PR1, 中級) No. 371

Hey, guys! How is it going?

Recently, I told you – or reminded you – about my love for photography, and so this time, I thought I would tell you a little bit about my new camera. This a Nikon Z series camera. It is a full-frame mirrorless camera, which means it produces the best quality images. It has a screen that tilts, but doesn't flip all the way out, like my old camera did, which is a bit of a shame. But apart from that, it is a huge upgrade. The photos are much sharper, and it is generally much easier to get good pictures. I especially like this little 50 millimeter lens.

Do any of you like taking pictures, too? Please let me know, O.K.?

Alright, guys, see you next time!

Dictation Contest (PR2 上級) No. 371

Hello, everyone. Welcome back to PR2.

Last time, we started reading about an aid group called Habitat for Humanity. It provides housings for people who have been affected by natural disasters. Do you remember? Well, today, we will be working on the remaining parts. Let's begin.

Americans Millard and Linda Fuller founded the Habitat for Humanity program in 1976. Habitat for Humanity is a non-profit organization that addresses the issues of poverty housing, currently working in dozens of countries around the globe. They help people affected by disaster to construct new houses with the help of teams of volunteers including specialists in architecture, engineering, and logistics. To date, Habitat for Humanity has built hundreds of thousands of houses in several different countries.

One of Habitat for Humanity's most notable projects happened in 2005, after Hurricane Katrina destroyed many of the homes in New Orleans. When the hurricane left, volunteers from the organization traveled in haste to the ravaged city and began constructing new houses for people who had lost everything in the storm.

All right! That would be it for Habitat for Humanity. What do you guys think about this passage? Please let me know in class.

In the next video, I will be coming back with a brand new topic. Thank you very much for coming, and see you next time. Bye!
