Hello, everyone!

Today, I will be talking about Sam's music lesson. This is part two of the story. Let's start.

"All of you will sing on parents' night," Mrs. Wendy said. "If your singing is loud, your parents will be proud!"

"Will lots of parents be there?" asked Sam.

"Yes. All the parents," said Mrs. Wendy.

"Gulp," said Sam. Sam's tail wiggled wildly. Sam was worried. Sam was shy.

This is it for today. See you!

Dictation Contest (PR 1, 中級) No. 473

Hello, everyone. Welcome back to PR1.

Today, we will finish up the story about the twelve months. Let's begin.

Anna was very eager to show her stepmother all the flowers. Back at the house, she spilled the flowers onto the table. Then she told her stepmother about the twelve men. Anna's stepmother and stepsister went to seek the twelve months. Their intent was to ask for gifts. Anna's greedy stepmother and stepsister looked and looked for the twelve men. However, they couldn't even catch a glimpse of them. They became very lost and never found their way home. Anna lived happily by herself.

All right, that is all for the story about the twelve months. Did you like the story? I certainly did. Thank you for watching today, and see you next time. Bye-bye!

Dictation Contest (PR2 上級) No. 473

Hello, everyone! Welcome back to PR2.

Today, we are going to talk about two candidates who wanted to become mayor of a city called Herbert. Let's begin!

The cosmopolitan city of Herbert needed to elect a new mayor. Two men aspired to become mayor: Mr. Smith and Mr. Peterson. Mr. Smith was a tall, handsome man. He was a phenomenal speaker, and the citizens loved him. However, Mr. Smith didn't know much about running a city. He was a pathological liar who merely flattered people with his words. Mr. Peterson was very different. He was a small, unattractive man. He was lame and limped when he walked. But he was an expert on politics and knew what was best for the people.

The citizens of Herbert didn't care about what the politicians had to say. No one listened to Mr. Peterson, even though he had great ideas. They cheered when Mr. Smith spoke, although he didn't talk about important things. His pretty words put people in a trance. All the polls predicted that Mr. Smith would win the election.

That is all for today. Don't forget to come back to see who wins the election and what happened afterwards. I'm sure it's going to be a very exciting story full of many lessons. Bye-bye!
