Dictation Contest (PR 1, 中級) No. 854

Hi, everyone! Welcome back to PR1.

Today, we'll be talking about using bad language. Let's begin.

Last week it came to my attention that one of our staff members had been using language on social media that is not appropriate for our office environment. Even if the language we use is not intended to create problems, eventually such words are bound to cause misunderstandings and hurt emotions. This employee has been notified, and I have agreed to keep an eye on the situation temporarily to make sure that the potential for abuse on social media ends. I would like you all to keep this in mind from here on out.

Alright, that's all for now. I hope you all have a lovely day. Bye!

Dictation Contest (PR2 上級) No. 854

Hi, everyone! Welcome to PR2.

Recently, there has been a shocking news about 4 children that were lost in the forest and could survive even after 40 days.

In a remarkable feat of resilience, four Indigenous children were rescued alive from the Colombian Amazon on Friday afternoon. The children miraculously survived a plane crash in the Amazon jungle that killed their mother, the pilot, and another adult. The children, aged 13, 9, 4, and 1, endured the dangers of the dense rainforest for 40 days. The search and rescue operation, known as Operation Hope, involved 150 soldiers, 200 volunteers, and 10 search dogs. Messages were broadcasted to the children, and food was dropped from helicopters to support their survival. After weeks of searching, the children were finally discovered alive, malnourished, and covered in insect bites, but in stable condition. Even the youngest child, he ended up spending his first birthday in the jungle. They were wrapped in thermal blankets and taken to a hospital for specialized care. Their survival was attributed to the knowledge they gained from their grandmother, an elder in the Indigenous community. The president of Colombia praised their resilience and called it a joy for the whole country.

What a relief! That is all for today's news. See you next time!
